

KÔRÈ COLLECTION I

MAKHOSSI

From Ségou.
For the world.

KÔRÈ

Kôrè is the highest stage of one of Mali's great initiation traditions. It represents the lifelong pursuit of wisdom—a journey through which knowledge is acquired, shared and placed in service of the community, seeking harmony between the individual, the community and nature. Its symbol is light.

Not the light that illuminates the world, but the light that illuminates understanding.

Born in Ségou, this first MAKHOSSI collection is rooted in that philosophy. Drawing on handwoven cotton, bogolan, indigo and other traditional textiles, it brings together different expressions of Malian craftsmanship through a single vision: that heritage is not something to preserve behind glass, but something to live, reinterpret and pass on.

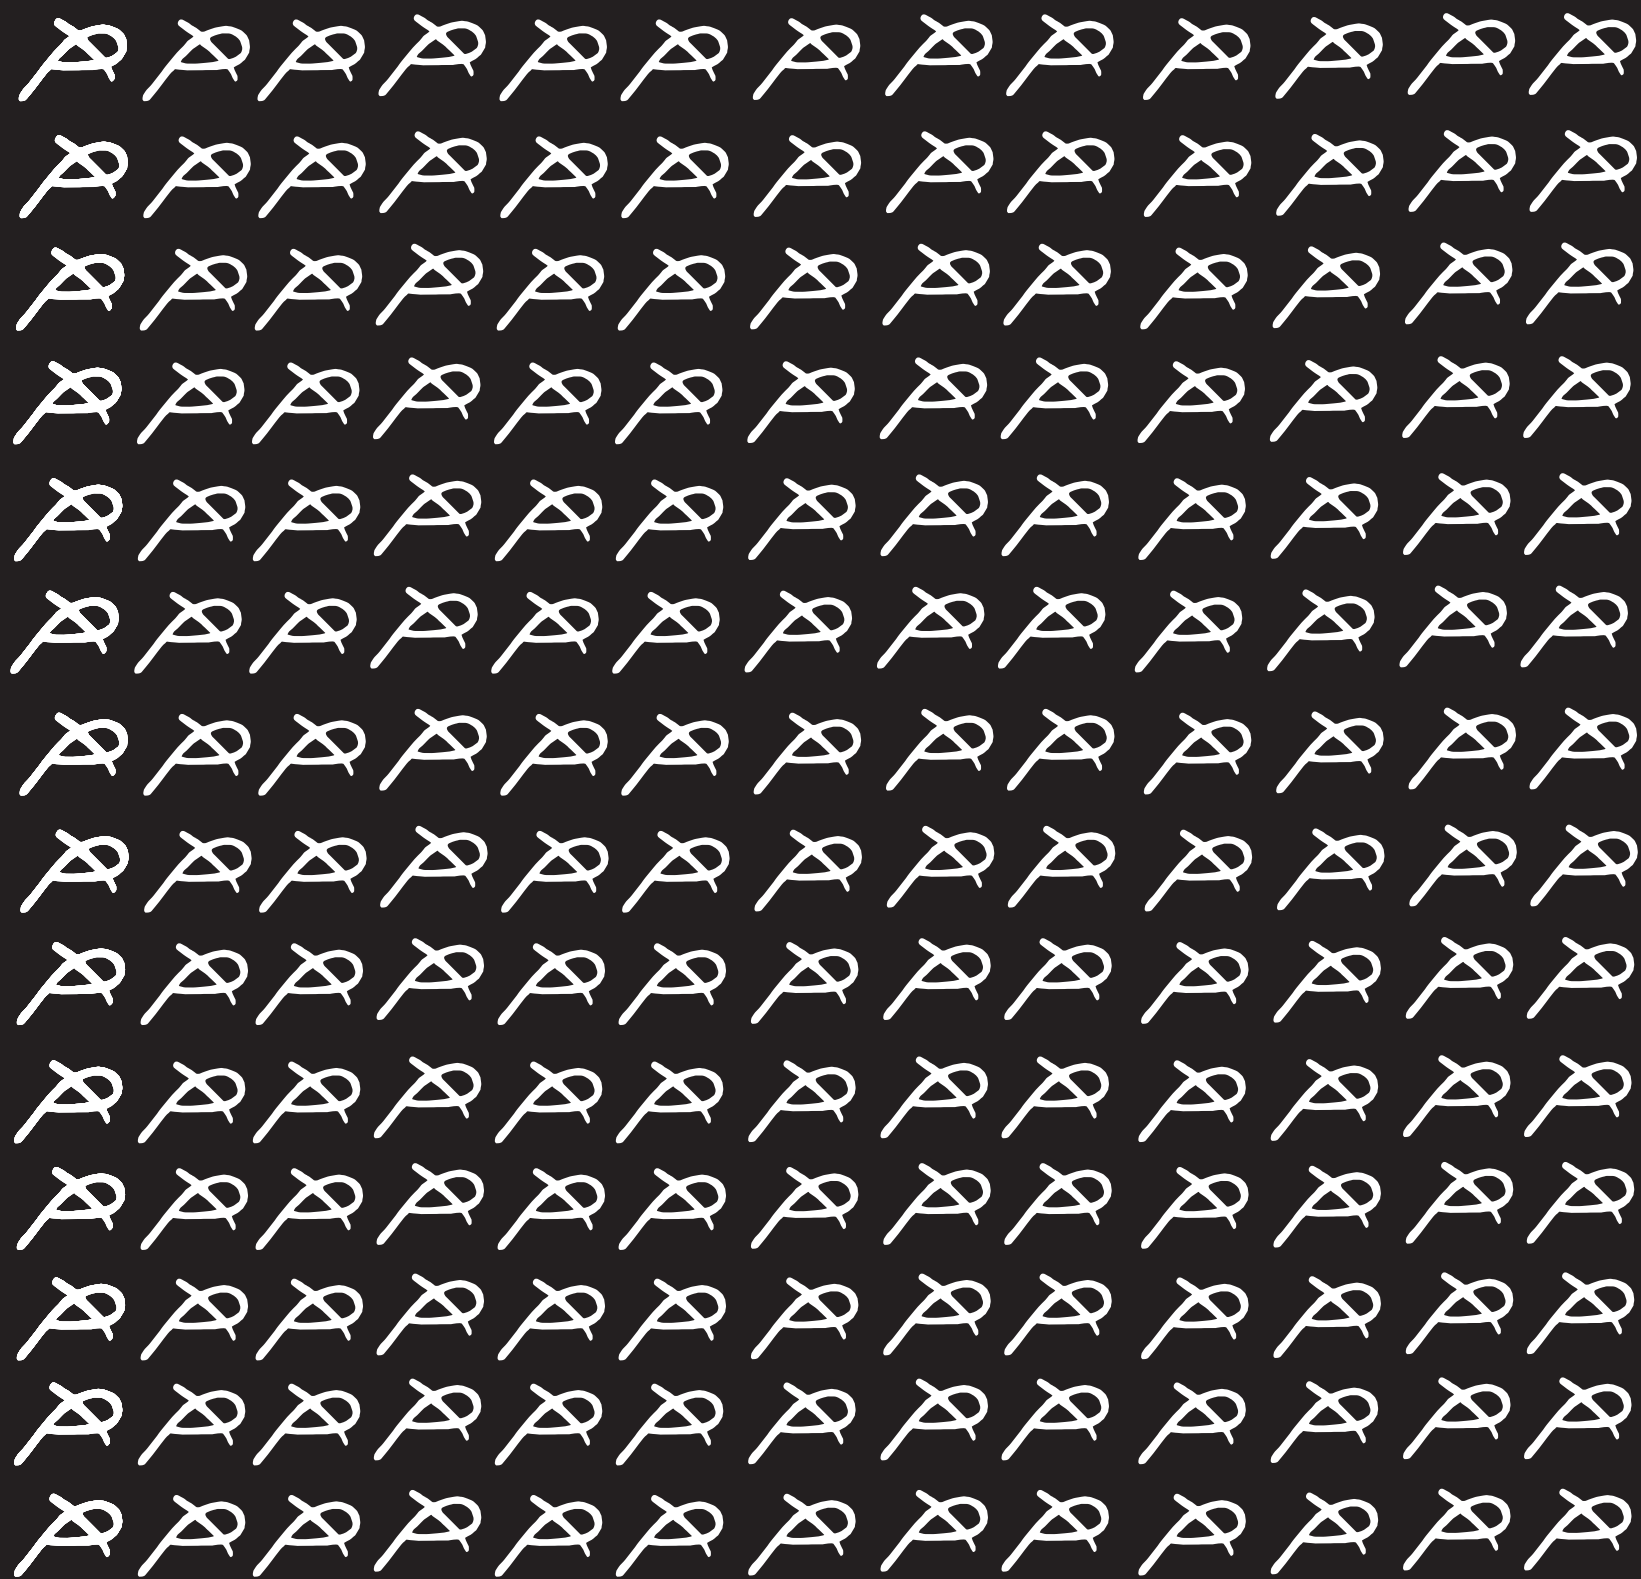

Every piece reflects a dialogue between tradition and contemporary creation, between individual expression and collective memory.

Kôrè is not the celebration of what we inherited.
It is the responsibility of what we choose to transmit.

Every collection begins with an idea.
Ours begins with a philosophy.

THE MAKHOSSI APPROACH

Ségou has long been recognised as one of West Africa's great centres of artistic creation, craftsmanship and cultural exchange. It is here that generations of weavers, dyers, artisans and storytellers have transformed knowledge into living tradition.

MAKHOSSI builds on that legacy. Each collection brings together contemporary designers and local artisans to create pieces that are deeply rooted in place while speaking to the world.

Our ambition is not simply to preserve craftsmanship. It is to ensure that it continues to create value for generations to come.

At MAKHOSSI, sustainability begins with people.

Each collection is produced in small quantities using natural materials and traditional techniques, ensuring that heritage continues to evolve through contemporary creation.
